New Zealand netballer Irene van Dyk knows a good Commonwealth Games opening ceremony when she sees one.

The veteran goal shooter is contesting her fourth Commonwealth Games. Her first, for South Africa, was at the 1998 Kuala Lumpur Games before she emigrated to New Zealand in 2000.

She said the ceremony was the "most colourful, beautiful and well-organised games I have ever been part of".

"It was fantastic to walk in with the flag and know you've got the rest of the team behind you," she said.

But the celebratory atmosphere inside the Jawaharlal Nehru Stadium was tempered by the news that potentially lethal dengue fever has broken out in the athletes' village.

An Indian lawn bowling official, Ruptu Gogoi, is the first person inside the complex to contract the mosquito-borne disease, which has affected 3,500 people in New Delhi this year and claimed seven lives.

Security around the venue was so tight that ticket holders typically took three hours to get through 19 concentric checkpoints in the ring of steel surrounding the main Games venue.

But once inside the stadium the crowd was treated to a once in a lifetime performance that started

You will be proud of our Motherland, India.
Do visit the Commonwealth Games, Charges start from just Rs, 100 per ticket.
